

Low-Cost Housing Options

FACT SHEETS ARE A JOINT PROJECT OF IONA AND THE DC DEPARTMENT OF AGING AND COMMUNITY LIVING

Rents in Washington, DC are expensive. On average, a one bedroom apartment can go for more than $2,000/month. Unfortunately, if you're seeking low-cost housing, your options can be scarce.

ASSESSING YOUR NEED

Meeting your budget might require some changes to your housing criteria. For instance, you might have to change your ideal location because rents tend to be higher downtown and in NW DC. You might also need to choose a smaller space, get roommates, or cut back on other spending.

When looking for housing, you might have success on the open market. Free magazines, like Apartment Guide and Apartment Showcase often can be found at metro stops. You can also access them online. Other online sources include Trulia and DC Housing Search.

DC'S HOUSING LOTTERY

If you can afford $1,000 to $1,500 per month, you might find relief through DC's Inclusionary Zoning Affordable Housing Program. In this program, housing is assigned by lottery. To enter the lottery, you must take a class and complete an online form. Find the form at <https://dhcd.dc.gov/service/inclusionary-zoning-affordable-housing-program>. See the right sidebar for class providers.

OTHER HOUSING OPTIONS

The government offers several programs to help older adults with low income or people with disabilities afford rent. However, all of these programs have waiting lists. Residents of these programs pay about a third of their income in rent.

Many buildings offer these programs, and each building keeps its own waiting list. Nationwide listings can be found online at <https://resources.hud.gov/>. The local nonprofit Bread for the City also keeps a list. Phone them at 202-265-2400, and ask for their Housing Access Program.

If you're facing eviction, a lawyer may also help stop slow the eviction process. Slowing the process gives renters more time to find other options. Both free and low-cost legal aid is available. See our Fact Sheet on Legal Assistance for resources.

For older adults needing housing now, options are scarce. Homeless shelters make up the bulk of emergency housing for older adults. Survivors of elder abuse may find alternate emergency housing, but only if there are openings. Find homeless shelters by calling the city's Shelter Hotline at 1-800-535-7252. Survivors of elder abuse who need housing may contact Elder Safe at 202-541-3950, or Kuehner Place at 202-797-8806, ext. 1311.

HELP FOR VETERANS EXPERIENCING HOMELESSNESS

Veterans may find help via the HUD-VASH program. This program also has a waiting list. To qualify, the veteran must be experiencing homelessness. Veterans must receive their health care from Veteran Affairs or qualify to do so. A veteran also must need and accept help from a case manager. To apply, call the National Call Center for Homeless Veterans at 877-424-3838.

WHAT IS A CASE MANAGER?

Case managers help people navigate and enroll in different programs and benefits. They might get you help with housing, transportation, home care, or meals. While a case manager may not find low-rent housing any faster, they might find other ways to help stretch your budget. See our Fact Sheet on Lead Agencies for resources.
